The current world is in a period of great development, great change, and great adjustment, full of uncertainty. China and the United States are the largest developing countries and the largest developed countries in the world today. They are also the five permanent members of the United Nations. They are in the process of world multipolarization, economic globalization, cultural diversity and democratization of international relations. A very important role. The development of Sino-US relations has global, strategic and exemplary characteristics. After Trump took office, Sino-US relations are in a critical period. Based on the perspective of the community of human destiny, thinking about promoting the development of Sino-US relations from the five dimensions of political dimension, economic dimension, security dimension, cultural dimension and ecological dimension is of great significance for better building a new-type relationship between China and the United States. The cooperation and win-win cooperation between the US and the United States are of great significance and have extremely important practical significance for promoting international balance of power and promoting world peace and development.

Keywords: A Community with a shared future for mankind; Sino-US development; The new major power relationship; Multidimensional analysis
In today's world, in the midst of a major change in the past 100 years, the economy is still recovering hard, the technological revolution is going on, the sudden risks are always there, and the world is full of uncertainty. In this context, how to focus on the common interests of China and the United States, build a community of interests and a community of responsibility, move towards a community of destiny, work together to promote Sino-US cooperation and win-win, and peaceful development of the world, and become the common aspiration of China, the United States and the world. China and the United States are the two major forces and two major markets in the world today. Under the background of multi-polarization of the world, economic globalization, cultural diversity and democratization of international relations, Sino-US cooperation is more global, strategic and exemplary, and is of great significance for promoting international power balance and promoting world peace and development. As General Secretary Xi Jinping emphasized: "As the world's largest developing country, the largest developed country and the first two economies, China and the United States should start from the fundamental interests of the peoples and peoples of the two countries and be brave in their efforts." The direction of building a new-type relationship between China and the United States is struggling. However, China and the United States have different national conditions and different developments, and the potential for cooperation needs to be further explored, especially in the Sino-US trade, the uneven development between countries and the global special Under the background of slow economic recovery, China and the United States have strengthened cooperation. Based on the perspective of the community of human destiny, we have accelerated the construction of a Sino-US interest community and a community of responsibility from the five dimensions of politics, economy, security, culture and ecology. Necessity and urgency are more prominent.

1. The political dimension: abandon the prejudice of institutional model and enhance political mutual trust

(1) Abandoning the institutional model bias and breaking the ideological barrier

Abandon the institutional model bias, focus on cooperation and win-win. China and the United States have formed a good situation of all-round exchanges and cooperation in various fields. Although China and the United States have chosen different development paths and different development models, the history of their development and evolution is intertwined and has deep source-to-source relationships. There are many similarities in cultural diversity and governance traditions. At the moment, China is working hard to realize the Chinese dream, and the American people are also struggling for their own American dream. Therefore, based on the principle of mutual benefit and win-win, we can abandon the institutional model bias and strengthen and deepen bilateral cooperation. China and the United States are the two most important markets for each other. The potential for cooperation is huge and the prospects for cooperation are broad. At the same time, China and the United States, as two stable forces in the international arena, uphold the philosophy of the world, use a broad world mind, abandon the prejudice of the institutional model, focus on cooperation and win-win, and constantly demonstrate the role of the great powers.

Break the ideological barrier and enhance political consensus. China and the United States should establish a free and pluralistic space for speech, and at the same time continue to strengthen dialogue and exchanges between China and the United States from the top to the private sector. By developing a market economy, the geopolitical interests of China and the United States will gradually become more consistent. Increase the cooperation and exchange points between China and the United States to promote common development; the two countries should abandon the ideological barriers, move toward pragmatism, and constantly eliminate mutual doubt through exchanges and dialogues. Just as President Xi Jinping proposed the concept of the community of human destiny, it is necessary to transcend ideological differences, transcend differences in values, transcend civilized model conflicts, and transcend social institutional contradictions. Only in this way can China and the United States put aside the burden, achieve deep integration, and work together to achieve win-win cooperation.

(2) Actively advocate multilateral thinking and continuously enhance political mutual trust

Actively advocate multilateral thinking and avoid unilateral actions. Geographically, China is the starting point of the ancient and modern Silk Road, and the United States has the will to actively integrate. From the perspective of status and function, China and the United States are important participants, promoters, builders and partners of the “Belt and Road” initiative. China and the United States have many similarities and connections. The cooperation between China and the United States is multi-level, all-round and wide-ranging, covering political, economic, trade and humanities exchanges. This requires the Chinese and American parties to put an end to unilateral actions, actively advocate multilateral thinking, effectively link the relevant state-implementing agencies, and build smooth channels to effectively connect resources.

Strengthen communication and unite the powerful forces of Sino-US political mutual trust. China and the United States should actively communicate and communicate. On the one hand, they seize the opportunity to actively explore the common points and intersections of interests; on the other hand, they work together to strengthen crisis management and opportunity management. In addition, in order to build a benign and interactive Sino-US relationship, the two countries should build a new type of relationship between the major powers that are not confrontational, mutual respect, mutual benefit and win-win, and conduct bilateral security dialogues in a timely manner to hold multi-level and multi-disciplinary forums. In the cyber security, military exchange, non-proliferation, anti-terrorism, law enforcement, maritime security and other political aspects, to strengthen cooperation, control differences, eliminate misunderstandings, and ultimately increase political mutual trust between China and the United States.

2. The economic dimension: strengthen policy communication, development planning docking, and create a common development and prosperity community of interests

(1) Strengthening policy communication and seeking the greatest common interests of China and the United States

Strengthen policy communication and move towards a community of interests. With the rapid development of economic globalization, the flow of goods, capital, information and talent between the two major markets of China and the United States has become closer and closer, and exchanges have become more frequent. China and the United States are increasingly forming a community of interests, a community of responsibility and a community of destiny for the integration of interests and security. The Cold War mentality and the zero-sum game are becoming more and more outdated and more and more unable to keep up with the pace of the times. The top leaders of China and the United States should strengthen policy communication, dialogue and exchanges on the economic level of trade and investment, economic restructuring, financial market reform and stability, energy cooperation and Sino-US investment agreements, and thus continuously enhance mutual understanding and find The greatest common interest of the two countries in the economic dimension will promote the sound development of bilateral economic and trade relations.
Strengthen the development planning and docking to achieve high-quality, high-level common development. As the two major forces in the international structure, China and the United States have deepened their dependence on each other's interests in the "you have me, I have you". China and the United States should strengthen strategic communication and development planning, and develop China-US development strategy. The vision identified in the medium is clearly defined as a specific timetable and road map, which continuously promotes strategic mutual trust and deepens strategic cooperation, thereby continuously maintaining the multilateralist process and the global free trade system.

(2) Establishing the concept of cooperation and win-win, and building a community of interests for the common prosperity and development of China and the United States

Establish a win-win cooperation concept and promote the formation of "two major markets" between China and the United States. In today's world, mutual connection and interdependence are major trends. The trend of peace, development, cooperation and mutual benefit is rolling forward. With the multi-polarization of the world, the deepening of economic globalization, cultural diversity, and the continued advancement of social information, today's human beings are more conditioned than ever to move towards the goal of peace and development. The realistic approach to the goal.

At present, the degree of interdependence between China and the United States continues to deepen. China and the United States are the world's largest developing countries and the largest developed countries, and they are highly complementary. China and the United States should establish a concept of cooperation and win-win, give full play to their unique advantages, actively explore cooperation points in economic cooperation, and seek the greatest common interest between China and the United States in the broad areas of economy, trade, energy, environment, humanities and other fields. Promote the formation of a large market in China and the United States.

Actively promote the "Belt and Road" to create a strong engine for the common prosperity and development of China and the United States. Since the introduction of the “Belt and Road Initiative” by General Secretary Xi Jinping in 2013, it has gradually become one of the main strategies for China's development and one of the main axes of China's diplomacy, and its influence on Sino-US relations is also increasingly apparent. In April 2017, President Xi Jinping visited the United States and President Trump held a "Haihu Manor Meeting" and said that China welcomes the US participation in the "One Belt, One Road" framework. In the same year, in June, after the first round of Sino-US diplomatic security dialogue, President Trump met with State Councilor Yang Jiechi and said that the United States is willing to cooperate with China on the "One Belt, One Road" project.

Obviously, China and the United States are increasingly interdependent in terms of capital, technology, information, and people's cross-border movements. At the same time, the "crossing" initiative and the "intersection" between China and the United States are becoming more and more prominent. To realize their own interests, the two major powers of China and the United States must actively promote the building of a new type of relationship between major powers, strengthen cooperation and win-win, constantly maintain such ties, and constantly build a community of interests for the prosperity and development of China and the United States.

3. The cultural dimension: open up more channels of cultural exchanges, and tighten the link between humanities, exchanges and cooperation.

(1) Innovating Sino-US cultural exchange and mutual authentication system and opening up more channels for cultural exchanges

The Chinese government attaches great importance to cultural construction and ranks cultural construction, political construction, economic construction, social construction and ecological civilization construction as the "five in one" general layout of the country to promote the happy life of the Chinese people and achieve common prosperity. The United States is the center of the world's cultural and creative industries. Its cultural industry's output value has accounted for 18-25% of the total GDP. After the military, it is the second largest industry in China. The two countries have strengthened their cultural exchanges and mutual understanding and cultural industry cooperation, and have great potential. China and the United States should promote dialogue and interaction between cultural institutions and cultural circles in the two countries through joint holdings of cultural forums, open up more channels for cultural exchanges, and build more bridges of spiritual communication across the Pacific to promote China and the United States. The relationship develops and the friendship between the two peoples makes a positive contribution.

Strengthening cultural exchanges and mutual learning is conducive to providing opportunities for the harmonious coexistence and integration between Chinese and American civilizations, and is conducive to the innovation of Sino-US cultural exchanges and mutual authentication systems. In modern China, there has been no shortage of "European winds and rains" in the past 100 years. The door to the closed-door country has been opened and the fast-track of China's "Western Learning to the East" has been opened. We have experienced the exploration and twists and turns of "Chinese and Western" and "Total Westernization". Today we have finally found a road to civilization that is suitable for our own development. It is of great practical significance for China and the United States to build a spiritual and civilized partnership. With the steady growth of Sino-US trade, the comprehensive laying of policy exchange mechanisms and the increasingly intensive exchange of personnel, the differences in cultural habits, thinking patterns and world sentiments between China and the United States have also brought many inconveniences. Pillars, understanding the differences between China and the United States from the height of civilized exchanges, eliminating misunderstandings and frictions, will provide more patience and confidence for political, economic and cultural exchanges between China and the United States, creating more flexible and magnificent space and future.

(2) Strengthening the exchanges and dialogues between Chinese and American civilizations and tightening the link between the humanities exchange and cooperation community

Strengthen the exchanges and dialogues between Chinese and American civilizations, and continue to open up a new world of humanities and Chinese exchanges between China and the United States. About the exchange of civilizations: There are ancient sayings such as "East Learning in the West" and "Western Learning in the East". Today there are "Silk Road Economic Belt" and "Maritime Silk Road".[3] The development of human society to this day, "communication" has become the two civilizations of China and the United States In the spirit of openness and mutual respect, China and the United States should enhance understanding and mutual trust, expand the breadth of Sino-US relations, and provide lasting impetus for building a new type of relationship between major powers. As early as 2015, when President Xi Jinping paid a state visit to the United States, China announced that it would subsidize 50,000 international students from China and the United States to study in the other country in the next three years; the US announced that it would extend the "100,000 strong" program from the US University to the United States and China. Elementary school, aiming to achieve the goal of 1 million American students learning Chinese by 2020; the two sides support the cooperation of university think tanks, hold the China-US University think tank forum every year, strengthen cooperation between universities and educational institutions of the two countries and promote public diplomacy projects; both sides will support The China-US Youth Makers Competition is held every year; the two sides announced that they will hold the “China-US Tourism Year” in 2016; the Chinese Ministry of Culture will cooperate with a number of public and private cultural institutions in the United States to carry out "crossing the Pacific" - Sino-US cultural exchanges and cooperation. Project"; China Film Group and the American Film Association will work together to continue cooperation on the film industry.
Jiabin Wang et al., IJSR, 2018; 2:23

Externalization in the line, with practice continue to tighten the link between the humanities exchange and cooperation community. First of all, the humanities exchanges between China and the United States started from a small place, externalized in action, starting from specific things. Secondly, China and the United States promote mutual understanding and deepen friendship between the people through scientific exchanges such as science, culture, sports, and charity. Finally, humanities The “time frame” of communication is more flexible and diverse, or a trip abroad, or the exchange and cooperation of health experts. It is also important that China and the United States promote active cooperation and establish closer ties in humanities exchanges. The Chinese civilization should have cultural self-confidence and will set off more cultural responsibilities. It must not only establish a brand-new image of Chinese civilization, but also make new contributions to the development of human civilization, send more Chinese voices, and constantly pursue "beauty." The ultimate dream of beauty, beauty of beauty, beauty and beauty, and harmony in the world.

4. The security dimension: adhere to the common building and sharing, and build a common foundation for peace and security

(1) Adhere to building and sharing, and promote cooperation through cooperation

Adhere to the construction and sharing, uphold the concept of peace. China is the largest developing country in the world, and the United States is the largest developed country in the world. The effective cooperation between China and the United States in security is both a requirement for safeguarding the interests of both sides and a need to resolve numerous security issues related to international peace and stability. The leaders of both China and the United States have always attached importance to the importance of bilateral cooperation for bilateral relations and even for maintaining world peace and order. China and the United States should persist in building and sharing, and continuously strengthen strategic cooperation in the security field, especially in a wide range of areas such as anti-nuclear proliferation, anti-terrorism, regional hotspots, climate change, transnational crime, disease prevention and control, and achieve cooperation and promote security.

Adhere to the concept of peace and promote common security in cooperation. "China's path of peaceful development is not an expedient measure, not a diplomatic rhetoric, but a conclusion drawn from the objective judgments of history, reality, and future. It is an organic unity of self-confidence and practical consciousness."

Therefore, China and the United States should uphold the principles of justice, uphold the concept of peace, work together to build a security community, and safeguard world peace and development. First, China and the United States should continue to strengthen strategic mutual trust through open communication and exchanges, focus on the common security interests of all parties, expand cooperation areas, innovate safe cooperation methods, and continuously strengthen the consensus and foundation of China-US development and cooperation. Second, China and the EU should maintain bilateral high-level exchanges, hold good annual leaders’ meetings.
give play to their leading role in China-US comprehensive strategic partnership, and better realize cooperation and promote security. Third, we must make full use of the high-level strategic dialogue between China and the United States, fully and effectively communicate on major issues of common concern, strengthen coordination on strategic, political, and security issues, build consensus, uphold fairness, justice, and cooperation, and achieve cooperation. Promote safety.

(2) Building a common foundation for peace and security, and seeking security for development At present, the international security situation is turbulent and complex. Traditional security threats and non-traditional security threats are intertwined. The connotation and extension of security issues are further expanding. At the same time, countries around the world are increasingly interested in harmony and security. Under this new situation, China and the United States should base themselves on a new type of relationship between major powers, establish a new security concept of common, comprehensive, cooperative and sustainable, actively build a strategic and economic dialogue mechanism between China and the United States, and find a way to conform to the times and meet the common interests of China and the United States. Important measures to maintain common security coordinated with each other and effectively build a common foundation for peace and security between China and the United States.

Development is the key to solving all problems. Security issues are closely related to development issues. China and the United States should properly handle imbalances in economic development, debt crises, financial crises, and energy crises. They must also pay close attention to the intensification of social conflicts and political turmoil caused by imbalances in development. Cable. China is an ancient country with profound strategic wisdom. The United States is a country with rich modern strategic practices. Although China and the United States are separated by half of the world and the vast Pacific Ocean, with the rich and practical experience and lessons of bilateral relations for more than half a century, China and the United States must be able to control each other’s differences and pay attention to each other’s important interests. We will build a common inheritance of peace and security and achieve security through development. Just as General Secretary Xi Jinping pointed out that while each country seeks its own development, it must actively participate in the common development of other countries. It cannot base the long-term development of the world on the basis that a group of countries is getting richer and the other countries are long-term poor and backward. Above. Therefore, China and the United States should work together to properly address various issues and challenges. We will seek security through development and jointly use development to build a foundation for peace and security, maintain the political stability and social stability of China and the United States, and consolidate the material foundation for maintaining world peace.

5. The ecological Dimension: Adhere to green, low-carbon, environmentally friendly, and seek common global ecological civilization construction

(1) Adhere to green, low-carbon, sustainable development and continuously expand new areas of cooperation

Both China and the United States are promoting ecological construction, adhering to green and low-carbon, actively building a sustainable global ecological civilization system, and focusing on sustainable development. Since the 18th National Congress, the Chinese government has proposed a series of ruling concepts and ruling slogans such as “Green Water Qingshan is Jinshan Yinshan”, “Building Beautiful China”, “Innovation, Coordination, Green, Openness, Sharing” and formed an ecological civilization. Strategic deployment and institutional framework for construction. China will take the improvement of environmental quality as the core, implement the most stringent environmental protection system, lay down the three major battles of atmospheric, water and soil pollution prevention, promote the emission reduction of major pollutants, strictly prevent and control environmental risks, and strengthen the construction of environmental infrastructure. Improve the systematization, scientificization, rule of law, refinement and informatization of environmental management, and accelerate the modernization of the ecological environment governance system and governance capacity. Dr. John Cobb, a famous American ecological philosopher, was one of the first scholars in Western society to put forward the concept of “green GDP.” He highly affirmed the achievements of China’s ecological civilization construction in recent years. He also emphasized the pursuit of economic development and the pursuit of green water. Qingshan is not contradictory. If you want to pursue GDP without green water, it means that this model is problematic. “People and nature should be harmonious symbiosis, not opposite.” Therefore, China and the United States share a common awareness of ecological construction and a solid foundation for ecological civilization in the construction of ecological civilization.

China and the United States continue to emphasize the importance of ecological civilization and expand new areas of cooperation. The United States is a country with a relatively advanced environmental protection system and an extremely comprehensive policy and legal system. In addition, the United States attaches great importance to promoting green mainstream culture and attaches importance to environmental protection education. In 1970, Denver Hayes, a Harvard law school student, launched the first “Earth Day” campaign, which marked the establishment of the mainstream status of American green culture. China has integrated the construction of ecological civilization into the overall layout of the five-in-one socialism with Chinese characteristics. General Secretary Xi Jinping has repeatedly emphasized protection priorities and called for understanding and solving environmental problems at the strategic height of ecological civilization construction. China and the United States continue to strengthen exchanges and cooperation in the field of environmental protection, actively explore and learn from each other's international advanced pollution prevention experience and models, and lay the foundation for the comprehensive development of new areas of ecological cooperation. Both China and the United States attach great importance to the protection of the ecological environment. Sino-US environmental protection cooperation has a long history. The experience in environmental protection is rich in experience, which is conducive to the two sides to learn from each other's strengths, actively explore new ways of environmental protection, and accelerate the transformation of environmental management strategy. It is conducive to the two sides to jointly address global environmental issues, continuously deepen the good cooperative relations and friendship established by the two sides in the environmental field, continuously expand new areas of cooperation, and commit to achieving sustainable development goals.

(2) China and the United States strengthen cooperation, pluralistic governance, and seek global ecological civilization construction

China and the United States should strengthen cooperation and achieve pluralistic governance. Multi-dimensional governance should be an important idea and principle upheld by China and the United States to work together to build an ecological civilization. Deepening Sino-US environmental cooperation is a concrete action to promote the construction of a global ecological civilization system. First of all, China and the United States should learn from each other's strengths, strengthen cooperation, and continue to innovate on the basis of cooperation, laying a solid foundation for achieving multi-dimensional governance of the ecological environment. The second is to expand the main body of cooperation, promote the formation of a new model of cooperation among governments, enterprises, think tanks and research institutes, and set an example for other countries in building ecological civilization. Third, use strategic opportunities such as the “Belt and Road” to play the role of China and the United States. The role of the two forces explores a new path for environmental cooperation between China and the United States and promotes the formation and development of a global ecological community.

Both China and the United States should raise their awareness of environmental protection and take the initiative to assume ecological responsibility and ecological obligations. Seeking the construction of a global ecological civilization. It is the common pursuit of the people of China and the rest of the world to jointly build a global ecological civilization and build a clean and beautiful world. In this process, China and the United States continue to play an increasingly important role in demonstrating the role of the major powers. First, the two sides strengthened the publicity and education of ecological civilization, further strengthened the ecological awareness of both sides, enhanced the awareness of the people’s conservation and environmental protection, and created a good social atmosphere for the protection of the ecological environment between China and the United States. Second, we must give full play to technological advantages, actively focus on key areas such as environmental protection technology, environmental big data, and integrated river basin management, carry out pragmatic cooperation, and undertake many ecological and ecological obligations. Third, the two sides should strengthen team building and environmental protection project cooperation and accelerate The experience and achievements of the environmental protection work between China and the United States will be jointly studied and shared, laying a solid foundation for building a global ecological community and seeking global ecological civilization.

References

